Long Sorrow

2005

12 minutes 57 secondes

super 16mm film transferred to hard disk

colour and sound

The film "Long Sorrow" shows the New-York jazz saxophonist Jemeel Moondoc, suspended from the facade of a building in a suburb of Berlin, named "Lange Jammer" by its inhabitants. The 1,8 kilometers long building is a sign of utopic and progressive hope of the ninetenseventies. The musician is performing a long improvisation inspired by the surrounding sounds. « Long Sorrow » is transcending limitations and bases it the interplay between inner and outer, familiar and unknown. It stimulates the extension of our imagination.

(It has been exhibited for the first time at the Hamburger Bahnhof for the « Preis der Nationalgalerie für Junge Kunst » and at the « Nicola Trussardi Foundation » in Milan, last autumn).

Window Drawing

2006

50 seconds

colour video, silent

The window, once again, is the main image of this video premiered at the occasion of this exhibition. It shows the projection of the window's shadow on the wall of a room. The light source comes from outside. Through the shadow 's projection, we perceive the outside and the falling snow. The storm brutally interrupts the football game. It « stops » also the window.

Passage à côté de l'heure

2006

a series of eight colour photographs

Laserchrome mounted on Reynobond

40 x 55 cm

A same subject is shown from different points of view. Along this series, the image -at first abstract- becomes a sign of time and its passing.

CENTRE GEORGES POMPIDOU

A screening of Long Sorrow and Now I see, 35mm video, is programmed on Monday April 24th, at the Centre Georges Pompidou, cinéma 1, niveau 1. A new performance by Jemeel Moondoc will follow the screening.
